

Delaware Native Species Commission meeting rescheduled to March 8 in Dover

DOVER – Delaware's Native Species Commission will meet at 10 a.m. Friday, March 8, in Room 220 at the Kent County Administrative Building, 555 Bay Road, Dover, DE 19901. The meeting is rescheduled from February's postponement due to inclement weather.

The Commission will discuss their operating procedures, 2019 priorities, and subcommittee reports. For more information, including the meeting agenda, visit the Delaware Public Meeting Calendar at <https://publicmeetings.delaware.gov/Meeting/62450>.

The Delaware Native Species Commission was formed by the Delaware General Assembly to reverse the trend of decline and extinction of Delaware's local plant and animal native species, implement recommendations of the Statewide Ecological Extinction Task Force, and provide expertise and assistance to state and local lawmakers, policy makers, educators, and other stakeholders. The Commission is comprised of 15 members, reflecting a balance of environmental professionals, government, and business stakeholders, with DNREC providing staff support.
